HIANG C-130 To The Rescue

Helicopter pilot Matthew Hardy from Maui is glad the 154th Group's C-130 Hercules was in the right place at the right time.

On Wednesday, about ten minutes after taking off on a routine training flight, the FAA Traffic Control Center notified the C-130 aircraft that a private helicopter had gone down in the ocean off Molokai.

The HIANG C-130 was under the command of Lt. Col. Roy Sakata, piloted by Col. Thomas Gresch (active duty Air Force attached to 199 FS), with MSgt. Alan Ogata as Flight Engineer and TSgt. Melvin Enoki as Loadmaster. Within five minutes, they were on the scene conducting search and rescue operations.

According to Lt. Col. Sakata, they began the search at 1,000 feet, but the rough seas made it difficult to see anything, so they descended to 500 feet.

After 20 minutes of searching, MSgt. Ogata made a definite sighting of a man in a life preserver. Using the C-130's self contained inertial navigation system, the crew marked the downed pilot's location.

"With the rough white water and no visual marking capabilities, we were not able to maintain visual contact with the survivor", said Lt. Col. Sakata. "After several overflights, TSgt. Enoki spotted the survivor again, but we were still unable to maintain contact", the colonel continued.

Communication is one of my biggest challenges. Keeping people informed of Group programs, priorities, activities and so forth is becoming increasingly difficult in these rapidly changing times. Keeping up with rumored force structure changes, potential mission changes and possible real-world deployments, is a job in itself. I recognize the importance of you knowing and understanding what's happening in the Group and try hard to see that you do. The command/supervisory structure are my primary spokespersons, and in periodic meetings, I share what I know so that the word can be spread.

The Kukailimoku is another one of my communication tools, and in an effort to make this column more responsive, I'm establishing a Commander's Action Line allowing for questions from you, and answers from the Staff and I.

Here are the rules:

 Questions relating to Group programs, activities and so forth that you've been unable to get answered through your normal supervisory/command chain may be forwarded to me.

 Questions should be written, and if your name/unit is included, a personal reply will be sent. Eventually, I hope to install an answering machine to take inputs.

 Questions of general interest applicable to the Group, or a large part of it, will be included in this column along with the answers.

 This program is not a substitute for working within your supervisor/command chain, but a means of my providing information and answers that aren't available elsewhere, for whatever reason.

For us to be as effective as possible I need to hear your comments, concerns and suggestions about life in the 154th Group. Inputs should be sent to:

154th Group

Commander's Action Line

360 Harbor Drive

Hickam AFB, Hawaii 96853-5517

A "puka" envelope addressed to 154th Group/CC will work for inputs submitted through our normal distribution system. Help me make this an effective communication tool and submit your questions. I can't promise you'll always like the answer, but I can promise you'll get one.

Legal Line

by Lt. Col. Stanley W. Kopacz, Jr., Staff Judge Advocate

Wills/Living Trusts/Living Wills

You should know what each of the above terms mean.

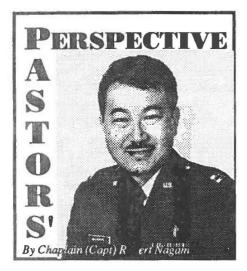

A will of course, is the document most people are familiar with. In essence, a will is a legal document that allows someone to pass their property along to someone else after death. A will also provides for a legal representative to handle the decedent's affairs after death. A will can also provide for the nomination of a guardian for minor children. It is a basic legal document everyone should consider obtaining.

A living trust is much more complex, but can have the benefit of allowing the decedent's estate to avoid probate (a feature that may make the extra cost of setting one up well worthwhile). When a trust is established, the person setting up the trust (settlor) places all of the trust property into a revokable form of ownership known as a trust. When the settlor dies, the property passes through the trust to the designated beneficiaries, thereby avoiding the necessity to probate trust assets. Trusts can result in large savings to decedent's estate.

The term "living will" merely is the term for "pullthe-plug-type of will", while the person is still living. In essence, it states that it is the will of the person who is dying from an illness or accident that he or she does not want to be sustained on extraordinary life support systems. This is referred to as death dignity.

Last month, I wrote down three ways to create a healthy working environment in our work places. The three ways are: first, strive for constructive communication; second, practice teamwork; and third, have the right attitude.

There are obviously more helpful ways, mainly for supervisors, but could include all. So, let's continue...

Fourth, motivate others through positive means. Appreciate, encourage and show trust and confidence in your co-workers. They will likely put more effort into their work and be more a part of the team. Harsh words or attitude makes people withdraw and unproductive. A word of advice that I'll always remember is: "Always praise people in public. Criticize and correct them in private." Treat people with dignity and respect. Life is too short and fragile to not treat people well.

Fifth, be a good example. If we ever see faults in others and criticize them, let's make sure we're ideal examples to follow. If everyone did their part in being a good example, we'd be in great shape.

Sixth, give clear expectations. When people know exactly what is expected of them, they know exactly what to concentrate their efforts on. They are more likely to succeed. If they are unclear in what is expected, they tend to be misdirected and frustrated. Also, expectations must be realistic and attainable. If so, it'll be a win, win situation.

Seventh, help people succeed in their careers. Most people are interested in making progress in their careers. Not too many of our people want to end up in a "dead end" career. Help morale by looking out for others.

I hope you'll consider the above because even though we're good, we want to be better. May God help us to be all that He has created us to be: winners!

Interdenominational Worship Service

An interdenominational worship

See you there!

For the Family

Some of us may consider our work with the Guard just a part time job. We spend one weekend a month and receive our monthly check. It's a great way to make a little more money, whether to buy necessities or to create extra spending money. And on top of that, we may even find our work interesting and a nice break from our civilian jobs. All of this is natural; however at the same time, we must realize that our work isn't just a part time job.

It isn't just a part time job because there is always the possibility that our work here may require our full time attention. With even short notice, we could be mobilized to a region in the world where our assistance might be needed. There were Air Guard units that were directly involved with Desert Shield/Storm. We must be ready to go when called.

But of late, there's another likely possibility: State Active Duty. For an extended period of time, we may be called to a need within our State. Following Hurricane Iniki, our State Active Duty was relatively short. But in Florida, the story was different. The Hurricane Andrew situation had many people on duty from two to three months. And, just this summer, the Midwest Flood required the greatly needed help of the Guard.

So our work isn't just a parttime job.

We must realize that one of the biggest reasons we exist is to be ready when needed. When called up, we'll realize more the value of our work and that our work isn't just a part-time job.

Just consider this: for some of us, if we were mobilized, our salaries would literally be cut in half. In that case, it would be a good idea to plan accordingly. And if we have people who depend on us, let's at least make initial plans that will help them through the initial part of our absence.

Family readiness, as well as individual readiness is so important and must be emphasized. That's why we have family support groups.

If your spouse or family member is interested in joining a family support group, contact your unit.

And now a word from our Commander: "FY 1993 turned out to be a very successful year for us. We converted all of our jets to the MSIP aircraft, passed our ORI with flying colors, had a good deployment to Singapore and improved on our aircraft status. It was a lot of hard work by a lot of dedicated people who made the year a success. We have lots of training planned for FY 1994, with deployments on the horizon. With your 'Can-Do' attitude and our 'NO KA OI' tradition to back us, I'm sure we can attain all goals set before us. I'd like to extend my aloha and mahalo for your support." Lt. Col. Mick Melich....... I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the KUKAILIMOKU staff for their support this past year. Their support has allowed me to 'let the news out' as far as Squadron happenings are concerned, regardless of the length of my articles. There have been many instances where I told them I had very little news but the article actually extended more than a page worth of news. They just smile, put the article in the proper format and go to press. They don't believe me anymore when I tell them my article is short, but that's okay. Mahalo for your support and look forward to working with you all again this fiscal year... And now for news of the Squadron... Much information was obtained by the TDYers who went to Langley and Eglin AFBs as well as Otis ANGB. CMSgt. Harold DeMello, SMSgt. Roy Kuwana, MSgt. Jim Puu and TSgt. Alan Umeda visited their counterparts at Langley AFB and gained valuable insight in the workings of the MSIP F-15 aircraft. They also reviewed the implementation and effectiveness of the USAF reorganization program, and brought back good notes on lessons learned. Maj. Terry Hudson, CMSgt. Thomas Hirao, CMSgt. Melvyn Taira and yours truly visited with counterparts from Eglin AFB. We were also able to gather reorganization data which will be used to compare with the Langley reorganization effort. CMSgt. Ken Morimoto and MSgt. Lester Ho visited our sister F-15 unit at Otis ANGB, Mass. They were able to get first hand information on the Guard reorganization test program. Much was learned there, and we all hope to make our own 're-org' process less painful... Our 11th Annual CAM Squadron Recognition Banquet is on Friday, October 8, at the Hale Koa Hotel. The last day to purchase tickets is today, so see your supervisor NOW. I heard that all 450 seats have been sold, so.....if you'd like to rent a room for the night, call TSgt. Yvette Miraflor (449-2709) for info. 2Lt. Ronin Burke has arranged for rooms at the Outrigger Royal Islander for about $40 per night... Congrats to Sgt. Channing Ching as he successfully completed Airman Leadership School at Fresno ANGB, California recently. Congrats also to TSgts. Gerard Lum and Kahi Hewitt as they successfully completed NCO Academy in Tennessee. If you would like to attend Leadership School and/or the NCO Academy you need to call MSgt. Lester Ho (449-7838) for information... Good luck goes to AB Alan DeRego as he left for basic training last month and should be in tech school at Sheppard AFB the end of this month. The welcome mat goes to SrA Marty Wilson, SrA Cris Ilefonso, SrA Charles Hood (all of Fuel Shop) and A1C Michael Guerrero (R&R Shop) as they joined the best unit in the ANG. Congrats to Sgt. Rudy Villanueva as he recently exchanged wedding vows with wife Sarah. Welcome to the CAM Sq family, Sarah... Well, that's all I've got for now, so til next month..." Some people are like popcorn. You don't learn what they're really made of until you put heat under them." (Author unknown) ...fhiga

by SSgt. Stephen L. Thomas

Remember the HANG Ohana? I know you old-timers do. Well, they're back - and better than ever! For those of you who don't remember, the HANG Ohana was an organization that consisted of musicians, singers and dancers exclusively from the Hawaii Air National Guard who, as far back as the mid-70's, provided traditional Hawaiian music whenever the HIANG held a special event. (Back then HIANG was abbreviated HANG; the "Ohana" has decided to keep the organization's name the same). The "Ohana" even had an outrigger canoe club, but, as time went by, we didn't hear from them as much.

Two years ago, TSgt. William Aberilla, crew chief from the 154 CAMS, and one of the original members of the organization, approached some members of the HIANG and asked them if they'd be willing to bring the HANG Ohana "back to life". After finding four very talented individuals, he shared his "aloha" for the group with Lt. Col.

James Hussey, Air Operations Officer from the 203 AREFS. TSgt. Aberilla knew Col. Hussey was a talented musician, who had a love for Hawaiian music. 'Abe' asked the colonel if he would be willing to help by teaching the musicians to sing, arrange their music and increase their repertoire.

No longer just a band, today, the "new" HANG Ohana also has Hawaiian dancers, and a choir. These talented individuals were the featured entertainment at the dedication ceremony for the 203rd Air Refueling Squadron back in February. (The Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. Edward V. Richardson, Senator Daniel Akaka and Nainoa Thompson joined the HANG Ohana choir and sang the Doxology in Hawaiian.) That was the first time the entire organization had performed in public for a long time. The colonel's concept of two types of musical entertainment for the ceremony was very well received.

Just to show how far the band has come in such a short time, they recently entered an Hawaiian music contest at the University of Hawaii. The competition was in music composed no later than World War II, and it was to be performed without microphones or amplification, except for steel guitar. With only a short time to rehearse that week, the band took 3rd place!

Just this last weekend, the band, under the direction of Lt. Col. Hussey, played for the HING Family Support Group Conference buffet dinner at the Sheraton Waikiki. On October 16, they will be performing for the HNGEA Business Meeting/Banquet at the Tripler Officer's Club, and on November 20, they'll be playing for the HIANG Awards Banquet Luau! How's that for exposure? How's that for promotion of the Hawaii Air National Guard? If that isn't enough, Lt. Col. Hussey says, "The band is seriously considering recording an album in another six to eight months." Talk about promoting the HIANG.

Just before the HING FSG Banquet, the band came up with a new name, just for the band, "Ho'o Kahiko", which means "singing in the old way", which is the main goal of the group. The band will still remain a part of the HANG Ohana, who's function is to promote Hawaiiana, but the colonel is looking but the colonel is looking for growth in the "Ohana", i.e., dancers, singers, etc. "There's so much talent in the Guard", he said. "We need to tap into it."

The band members all sing and play at least one instrument. They include: Lt. Col. James "Kimo" Hussey, director, on ukulele; TSgt. William Aberilla on guitar; TSgt. Alberto Batis from the 154 CAMS Training section, on bass; SSgt. Paul Kim, crew chief from the 154 CAMS, on ukulele and steel guitar; and Kawika Langsi, HIANG retired, on guitar, with TSgt. Craig Tanaka, Operations Resource Management Specialist from the 203 AREFS as their talented sound man.

The next time you're at a HIANG function, don't be surprised to see "Ho'o Kahiko" performing. The Hawaii Air National Guard should be proud of the HANG Ohana, our 'ambassadors.'

MERCURY

Mercury, also known as "Quicksilver", is a stable element found everywhere, such as in rocks, soils, plants, animals, water, and air. It is becoming increasingly significant as a potential hazard in the environment.

Exposure to mercury occurs through skin absorption, ingestion, or inhalation (mercury vapors). Nonoccupational exposure sources are air pollution, medicinals of mercurical compounds, broken thermometers and barometers, and consumption of ocean fish.

Acute industrial toxicity is rare. Chronic poisoning symptoms are a "blue line" on the gums, upper respiratory tract, and eye inflammation. Blood, urine, feces, kidneys, and thyroid tests are done.

A mercury spill must be cleaned up immediately avoiding all contacts with the substance in the process. Mercury must be picked up by water pump suction or by a wet sweeping compound. After handling mercury or mercury compounds, the skin must be thoroughly cleansed. Exposed workers should be checked through a medical facility.

154 CAMS Tests Experimental Cleaning Equipment

by 1st. Lt. Charles Anthony

The 154th Group has been selected as the only unit in the Air Force (Active Duty, ANG, or Reserves) to install the CO2 Aircraft Cleaning Equipment as part of a test program. SMSgt. Larry De Rego from the 154 CAMS says the HIANG was chosen to conduct the test, partly because of Hawaii's corrosive environment. SMSgt. De Rego says the system sprays out fine CO2 pellets, lifting off dirt particles from the aircrafts's skin or engines. If the CO2 rinse facility tests are successful, the Air Force may have the equipment installed at other flying units.

HING FSG Holds Annual Conference

by SSgt. Stephen L. Thomas

The Hawaii National Guard Family Support Group held its annual conference last weekend at the Sheraton Waikiki Hotel. The theme for the conference was "Guard Is Family".

The purpose of the conference was to bring members of the Hawaii Air and Army National Guard together along with unit commanders and Family Support Group volunteers to discuss the mission of the Guard, its relationship to the family and the importance and support of both.

The conference included training sessions, networking and group discussions on deployment of the National Guard for State and Federal missions along with the mission and goals of the Family Support Group program.

The highlight of the weekend conference was the Saturday evening banquet which featured "Ho'o Kahiko", the Hawaiian musical group from the HIANG's own "HANG Ohana".

An opening prayer was given by Capt. Robert Nagamine, 154 Gp Chaplain. Maj. Gen. Edward Richardson, the Adjutant General, then joined the band in singing the Doxology in Hawaiian.

If you or a member of your family would care to join the Family Support Group or would like more information, you may call 2Lt. Laura Jones, HING FSG Coordinator, at 732-1823.

EANGUS

by SSgt. Jan K. N. DeRego Area VII Director, EANGUS

EANGUS has been actively supporting expanded Commissary Privileges for Guard and Reserve members and their families, and Gray Area Retirees, eliminating the Commissary Privilege Card, thus providing unlimited privileges for members of the Guard and Reserve.

The expansion of Commissary privileges will not only benefit the Guard/Reserve, but will also help stabilize the Commissaries during the drawdown of the active forces. Extending the benefit to the Guard and Reserve will also help eliminate unnecessary training distractors and enormous costs in issuing and maintaining the Commissary Privilege Cards.

The National Guard alone pays almost 5 million dollars in manpower costs to manage the card. Extending this privilege will have little impact on the budget because only 10-15% of Guard/Reserve personnel utilize the Commissary. Congress subsidizes the Commissary $1.00 for every $6.00 spent. EANGUS also believes it will have little impact on local grocers.

Other exclusive legislative bills are in progress: "National Guard Issues in House and Senate Defense Authorization Bills and the Expansion eligibility for burial in National Cemeteries to persons who have 20 years of service creditable for retired pay as members of reserve components of the Armed Forces," according to Senator Daniel Akaka (D), Hawaii.

The 21st Annual HNGEA Business Meeting and Banquet will be held at the Tripler Officer's Club on October 16, 1993. All First Sergeants are encouraged to attend and represent your unit.

HNGEA, your passport to legislation and benefits.

US Marine Corps helicopter joined in on the search. With the HIANG C-130 returning to 1,000 feet, the USCG C-130 flying at 500 feet and the Marine Corps helicopter circling at 250 feet, they continued to search some more.

"We followed the current as best we could," said MSgt. Ogata. "If he had drifted into open ocean, he probably would not have been found. When you're looking for somebody in the ocean, you're looking for a reflection from a mirror, a flare, colored smoke or homing in on a beacon. Finding somebody with nothing but a life preserver is very difficult at a thousand feet."

Then Col. Gresch and MSgt. Ogata spotted the survivor again and marked his new location. TSgt. Enoki hooked up his harness, the C-130 was depressurized and Tsgt. Enoki prepared to drop the downed chopper pilot some emergency supplies. "We were going 165 knots," said MSgt. Ogata, "That's about as slow as you can go and still keep the aircraft up in the air. Still, even at that speed, we were a couple miles away by the time we got a mark." Instead, they vectored the Marine helicopter over to the survivor's location. Within minutes the chopper was hovering over Hardy. The helicopter lowered a swimmer on a wench and brought the grateful pilot up to safety.

Fortunately, Hardy suffered only contusions and jelly fish stings. The Marines took him to Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station and from there he was transferred to Castle Medical Center.

"The Coast Guard C-130 crew thanked us for doing an outstanding job", said Lt. Col. Sakata. "We had searched, sighted, and conducted the successful pick-up of a downed helicopter pilot. We had our first save", he continued. "Our HIANG C-130 operational support aircraft training flight was concluded with a real-life save, and a ton of self satisfaction for the crew".

After standing by until the rescue was completed, the HIANG C-130 was released by the Coast Guard and flew off to complete just another "routine" aircrew training mission.
