199th tackles the ALPS

The Hawaii Air National Guard recently scored another first in a long list of accomplishments by taking part in Project ALPS (Air Launched Probe System) at Kwajalein Missile Range in the Marshall Islands.

The project, sponsored by the U.S. Army B. llistic Missile Defense Command and under the direction of the Defense Nuclear Agency, gathered information on special radar responses to a high-speed airborne target.

In early April, 26 HANG members and one F-4C Phantom deployed to Kwajalein. Supporting the movement were two C-130s from the California ANG and an Arizona ANG KC-135. Also taking part in the test project was the U.S. Air Force's phased-array radar system COBRA JUDY carried on board the USNS Observation Island.

The HANG mission involved carrying a special two-stage rocket to extremely high altitudes and releasing it at supersonic speed. The rocket was carried aboard the centerline station of the HANG F-4C back seater, had to wear military fullpressure suits. Both men said the "space suits," similar to those astronauts wear, were cumbersome but provided an added margin of safety in the event of a high-altitude emergency.

The aircrew, Capt. Edward Pickering as pilot and Capt. Michael Melich as

The air and ground crews practiced for two days working on control, accuracy and timing for the actual rocket launch.

Ground crews loaded the Pedro-Recruit solid propellant rocket aboard the HANG jet as Capts. Pickering and Melich received their last-minute briefings. Taking off from Bucholz Army Air Field on tiny Kwajalein, the HANG jet roared into the upper atmosphere. On the very first run everything proved operational so the order to fire was given.

The mission was rated 100 percent successful with much of the data coming from radar sensors on Roi-Namur, a small atoll north of Kwajalein.

The HANG members and equipment returned to Hickam Air Force Base the closest thing to astronauts in the Air National Guard.

TAKE US to your leader. Capts. Michael Melich (1) and Ed Pickering, 199th Tactical Fighter Squadron, stroll out to their F-4-Phantom on Kwajalein.

Both men are wearing full-pressure suits for high-altitude protection. They launched a special rocket to help test various radar equipment.

The 111th Army Guard Band, skydivers, an Army versus Air Guard softball game and much, much more highlight Hawaii National Guard Night with the Islanders June 25.

The Hawaii National Guard Enlisted Association is sponsoring the evening to benefit its scholarship fund. Special yellow tickets are available from all HNGEA unit representatives for $2.50.

A special section of the bleachers is reserved for guard members which should make things even more interesting. During the night special prizes will be awarded with the Grand Prize (a trip for two on Aloha Airlines to any neighbor island along with two nights at a Hukilau Hotel and a free Budget Rent-a-Car) will be given away during the seventh inning stretch of the Islander-Vancouver game.

Action begins at 5 p.m. with the HARNG versus HANG All-Star softball game. At 6 p.m. the 111th Band takes to the field. Skydivers from the Tropic Lightning Sport Parachute Club drop in at 6:45 p.m. Then two attractive HANG members will sing the National Anthem and Hawaii Pono'i.

Everyone is welcome! Get your tickets now and bring your family and friends. Wayne Soma, coordinator, promises a fun-filled evening for all. Call 737-8839 for more information.

Guard helps Maui

Hawaii Army and Air Guard members went to the aid of Maui County twice this spring.

Early April rains caused heavy flooding on East Maui. An Army Guard helicopter went to help out. Carrying supplies and county workmen into Hana and Kaupo, the helicopter crews played a large part in helping to keep things going in the area cut off by landslides across Hana Highway.

Only a week later, the guard was again called upon; this time to Kalaupapa Settlement on Molokai. Continuing torrential rains washed out its aging fresh-water system. On April 8, when it was certain water tanks would run dry before repairs could be finished, a guard 450-gallon water tank was airlifted in by an Army CH-47 "Chinook" helicopter.

The next day, the Hawaii Air Guard's C-7 transport plane began a series of trips from Hickam Air Force Base to Kalaupapa carrying fresh water, and hundreds of feet of metal pipe and fittings. An Army Guard OH-58 from Wheeler Air Force Base carried over Capt. Jerry Matsuda, state engineering officer, to survey the site and make a report to Brig. Gen. Ishimoto.

The repairs went well and in two days fresh water was again flowing from the mountain streams behind Kalaupapa.

Moriguchi and Leong new association chiefs

Lt. Col. Raymond J. Moriguchi, commander of the 150th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, Hawaii Air National Guard (HANG), at Kokee Kauai, is the new president of the Hawaii National Guard Association.

Moriguchi, who lives in Waimea, will serve for one year as head of the 523-member organization made up of officers and warrant officers of the Hawaii Army and Air National Guard. Last year, Moriguchi served as vice president.

Elected along with Moriguchi were Lt. Col. Haruo Shigezawa, commander, 159th Service Battalion, vice president; Capt. Peter Pauling, a pilot with the 199th Tactical Fighter Group, secretary; and 1st Lt. Vernon Miyagi, 12th Administration Company, treasurer.

The new slate of officers were elected at the association's annual business meeting May 22.

Meanwhile, Kona was the site for the Hawaii National Guard Enlisted Association's 1982 business meeting and banquet on May 29.

The 1982-83 applications are available to all current members of HNGEA and their dependents. Applicants must be accepted or enrolled in an institution of higher education and carry at least 12

227th moves out

"Sergeant, the Guard is being mobilized, report to the unit as soon as possible." Those words may soon be heard by Hawaii Army Guardsmen.

Back in 1968 the Hawaii Army National Guard was called up to participate in the Vietnam crisis. For many guardsmen the memories of what happened fourteen years ago still linger.

Recently, forty members of the 227th Engineer Company, commanded by Capt. Gregory L. Burgess, took part in a Mock Mobilization Exercise (MOBEX) and received first-hand experience of what it takes to prepare to "move-out. One platoon of the 227th Engineer Co. along with selected individuals from the Headquarters section were called-up and ordered to the Waiawa Armory in Pearl City by 7:00 a.m.

At the Waiawa Armory, the State Area Command (STARC), directed by Col. Ellsworth Bush, set up a mobilization processing station.

An additional forty members of the 12th Administration Company, Hawaii Army National Guard along with selected staff members of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, helped to expedite the processing of requried forms and provided assistance to families when needed.

The various stages of processing for each individual included:

- 1. Medical Section: Updating of medical records, innoculations and Polio vaccines.
- 2. Finance Section: Setting up allotments for self and family members back
- 3. Personnnel Records Section: Social Security numbers of you and your dependents; names, places, and dates of birth of parents, spouse, and children; names and address of employer and a list of pension and health benefits, etc.

4. Legal Section: Updating your will; listing of insurance policies of all kinds; titles to real estate property and automobiles; leases; etc.

After each of the four stations, guardsmen inventoried their individual lockers and field gear and then loaded everything on the awaiting trucks.

The exercise proved to be very practical and beneficial for the 277th Engineers. The company deploys to Korea from September 11-25 for their annual training exercise.

ARNG goes up in strength

The Army National Guard (ARNG) reported recently that Guard strength has reached its highest level since 1975.

At the end of February, ARNG assigned strength was 400,964. The guard reached that figure a month ahead of original projections.

Officials explained it represents the highest strength of the guard during a totally voluntary, non-draft-influenced period. The highest ARNG strength ever occurred in 1966 during the Vietnam era, when 421,000 soldiers made up the Guard. This was seven years before the start of the "all-volunteer force."

The guard expects to set a new strength record a year from now, officials noted. The fiscal year 1982 objective is 412,000, with a goal of 457,000 by

Brig. Gen. Arthur U. Ishimoto's promotion to adjutant general puts him at the head of a long and distinguished line of men, some with very interesting histories.

In 1846, the Hawaii National Guard's first adjutant general was born in Plymouth, England. John Harris Soper moved with his family to Chicago as a child. Soper, then 31, came to Hawaii to manage the Pioneer Mill in Lahaina. A former California National Guardsman, he stayed in the sugar business until 1884 and his appointment as Marshall of the Kingdom by King David Kalakaua. In 1893 and the overthrow of the monarchy, Soper became commander in chief of all the military forces under the Provisional government. When the republic was set up the following year, Soper assumed the position of Hawaii's first adjutant general until 1907. He died in Honolulu in 1944 at the age of 98.

Brig. Gen. John H. Soper July 6, 1984 — April 1, 1907

From 1907 through 1915, John Walter Jones commanded the Hawaii National Guard. Not too much information on him to relate.

Col. John W. Jones April 2, 1907 — August 15, 1915

Jones arrived in Hawaii in about 1892 and took a job as "shorthand reporter, Supreme Court" according to records of the time. Later in his life, after his service as adjutant general, Jones took over the job of Collector of Internal Revenue for Hawaii under President Harding.

Samuel Ignatieff Johnson was the third adjutant general and he came the furthest of anyone to do it. Born in Odessa, Russia in 1873, Johnson (not his original name) served three years in the Cossack cavalry! After one year in the Imperial Russian Navy, Johnson, then 20, left Russia when the word was spread that he didn't like the Russian Czar.

One year's duty with the Argentine army and Johnson found his way to Hawaii in 1893 when he became one of the first full-time members of the Hawaii National Guard.

He also served in a number of civilian positions: road supervisor, superintendent at the garbage department, lumber company manager and, for awhile, as postmaster of Pahoa, Hawaii.

Brig. Gen. Samuel I. Johnson Aug. 16, 1915 — Feb. 19, 1918

In 1915, Johnson returned to Honolulu and his appointment as adjutant general. He must not have liked it much because in 1918 he resigned to accept an appointment as a major in the U.S. Army.

This obviously colorful gentleman then spent some time as a plantation manager in the Philippines, a ranch manager in Texas and a prohibition enforcement officer in San Francisco where he lived until his death in 1948.

Captains and Majors can take heart from the next adjutant general. Will Wayne took over as a major when Johnson stepped down. Even with an immediate promotion to colonel, Wayne also apparently didn't like the job. After only six months, Wayne resigned to go into the regulars. Wayne came to Hawaii in 1918 to to be city editor for the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. After managing the Mid-Pacific Carnival for two years, Wayne became Governor Lucius Pinkham's secretary from where he received the appointment to adjutant general. No further record of Wayne can be found.

Another newspaperman served Hawaii next. Harry S. Hayward came to Hawaii in 1910 to work for the Honolulu Star soon to become the Star-Bulletin. From 1921 to 1928, Hayward was the paper's vice president and general manager.

At the time of his appointment as adjutant general in September 1918, he was commander of the 2nd Co., 1st Battalion. He apparently continued to work at the Star-Bulletin while serving as adjutant general. In his letter of resignation in February 1921 he said, "It is not possible to do justice to my employers and the Guard."

Col. Harry S. Hayward Sept. 23, 1918 — Feb. 8, 1921

In 1928 he formed his own insurance company. Hayward died in Honolulu in 1938.

Col. William D. Potter Feb. 9, 1921 — July 3, 1923

You wouldn't call the next adjutant general a real kamaaina. William D. Potter was born in New Hamshire in 1878. He joined the Army, serving as an infantryman in the Spanish-American War. He came to Hawaii around 1920 as assistant to the Departmental Quartermaster, U.S. Army. In December 1920, he took over command of the Hawaii National Guard's 1st Infantry. In 1921 he took over as adjutant general. When 1923 rolled around, Dunning retired, moved to California and entered business. He apparently did die, but we don't have the date.

Then came the shortest reign of any Hawaii adjutant general. Maj. John W. Short, then 59, must have been in the right place at the right time. He was appointed adjutant general Aug. 1, 1923 and served for three weeks. In civilian life, Short served in the Customs House for many years. He died in Honolulu in 1931.

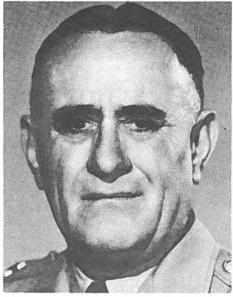

Perry M. Smoot served Hawaii for 23 years as adjutant general, 1923-1946. Born in 1882 in Washington D.C., Smoot came to Hawaii to manage an auto parts and tire business. Working for Schuman Carriage (when they still. had carriages) and Kahuku Plantation, sometime before World War I he joined the Hawaii National Guard. He went on active duty in 1917 and served as an infantry captain.

Gov. Farrington appointed Smoot adjutant general on Aug. 25, 1923. Among other things he supervised the federalization of the Hawaii National Guard in 1940 and organized the Territorial Guard in December 1941. He was appointed Territorial Selective Service Director and relieved of the command of the Territorial Guard. In August 1945, Smoot was released from active duty and resumed his position of adjutant general. However, he did that apparently without the okay of Gov. Stainback. Smoot said he was entitled to his old job under Federal law. In August 1946, the Territory paid him for one year's services and he retired. He died in a veteran's hospital in Delaware in 1959.

Maj. Gen. F. W. Makinney Aug. 4, 1946 — Dec. 2, 1962

From August 1946 through December 1962, the Hawaii National Guard (divided into the Army and Air in 1946) was under the command of Maj. Gen. Fred W. Makinney, appointed by Gov. Stainback and approved by President Truman.

adjutant general, was born in Honolulu on Aug. 23, 1899. He attended Punahou and then the U.S. Army Military Academy at West Point. He went into the regular Army and saw duty in World War II in the 6th Armored Division. He returned to Hawaii a colonel in early 1946.

After his appointment as Hawaii's ad-

Makinney, the HNG's first kamaaina

After his appointment as Hawaii's adjutant general, Makinney remained as a colonel until 1951 and obtained his first star. The second came along in 1953. Also in 1953, Makinney took on the additional duty of director of state civil defense, a role his successors have also assumed.

Makinney orchestrated many changes in the Guard including the introduction of the jet age into the Hawaii Air Guard and the division's assumption of its air-defense mission.

Makinney also oversaw the Army Guard's move into the rocket business in the late 1950s and early '60s.

When he took over in 1946, there were only 1300 men in the Hawaii National Guard. When he left 16 years later, strength was up to 4817 men (no women in the Hawaii Guard until much later).

Makinney served under four territorial and state governors: Stainback, Oren Long, Samuel King and William Quinn. He passed away several years ago.

In December 1962, the Hawaii National Guard got its second kama-

Maj. Gen. Robert L. Stevenson Dec. 3, 1962 — July 15, 1966

aina adjutant general with the appointment of Robert L. Stevenson. Born in Honolulu on April 10, 1915, Stevenson attended St. Louis College and McKinley High School. He attended the University of Hawaii graduating in 1937 with a degree in civil engineering.

Stevenson (no relation to the author of the same name) joined the Hawaii National Guard as a private in 1931. He received his commission in 1936 while still at the University of Hawaii.

He was called to active duty in 1940 along with many other Hawaii guardsmen. He saw combat duty on Guadacanal, West Georgia and Luzon islands. He returned to Hawaii in early 1946 as a colonel.

Stevenson took over command of the 298th Regimental Combat Team before serving as Army Guard chief to staff from 1953 to 1957.

Back in the '30s, Stevenson started out on another career, one that would heavily impact on his service with the guard. He began to work for Home Insurance Company in 1938 after a brief engineering stint with the Honolulu Police Department where he worked alongside a young man named John Burns. Stevenson stayed with Home Insurance, later to become First Insurance. In 1957, business forced him to resign from the guard.

In 1963, there was a new governor, former policeman John Burns, and Stevenson came out of military retirement to take the job of adjutant general at the request of his long-time friend. After he left the guard the second time in 1966, it was to take over as president of First Insurance.

Among numerous decorations, Stevenson holds the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star and the Purple Heart. He's retired now from the insurance business and devotes his time to his family and Manoa home.

For six months after Stevenson retired, Brig. Gen. Valentine A. Siefermann, then HANG commander, served as acting adjutant general (July 1966-December 1966). More on him later.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin J. Webster Dec. 5, 1966 — March 21, 1973

On Dec. 5, 1966, a former three-star Air. Force general became Hawaii's adjutant general.

Benjamin J. Webster born in New Haven, Connecticut on April 4, 1911, came to Hawaii in 1914. Like Gen. Makinney, Webster attended Punahou and West Point, class of 1932.

The lure of the air got to the young lieutenant as it was off to Randolf Field, Texas and pilot training. Webster came back to Hawaii serving with the 6th Pursuit Squadron.

During World War II, after a teaching tour at West Point, Webster found himself executive officer of the 67th Fighter Wing, Eight Air Force (Europe) in late 1943. By October 1944, he was in charge of the Eight Fighter Command.

Webster returned to Hawaii in 1948 working in several important Air Force positions. By 1964, still in the Air Force, Webster was a Lt. Gen. serving as commander, Allied Air Forces, Southern Europe. He retired from the Air Force in October 1966, returned to Hawaii and was appointed adjutant general in December of the same year.

General Webster has recently been dividing his time between Honolulu and Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Maj. Gen. Valentine A. Siefermann April 1, 1973 — Dec. 30, 1981

From April 1973 to the end of December 1981, Valentine A. Siefermann held the reins of the Hawaii National Guard and State Civil Defense. Some of his major accomplishments include: establishment of the "Roundout" program with the U.S. Army's 25th Infantry Division and, as HANG commander, developing that organization into one of the best in the nation. Siefermann has embarked on several business endeavors since his retirement.

HANG Doctor sets U.S. record

Dr. (Lt. Col.) Jim Gallup doesn't get older, he just gets faster. At 46, Gallup is running faster than ever. The proof is not hard to find. On May 16, Gallup set an United States record in the men's 45-49 age class by winning the Windward half-marathon in 1:11:17.5. He knocked almost 23 seconds off the previous mark held by a Chicago runner.

The half-marathon took place on the windward side of Oahu, starting and finishing in the Enchanted Lake area of Kailua.

Gallup outran 1,000 other runners in his American record race. Gallup, a pathologist at Honolulu Medical Group, works part time as a flight surgeon with the 199th Tactical Fighter Squadron, Hawaii Air National Guard. Quite often you can find him in the back seat of a HANG F-4C. With almost 300 hours of flight time, Gallup handles the job very Occasionally he'll run to drill at Hickam Air Force Base from his home in Hawaii Kai, a mere 20 miles or so. As far as getting older is concerned, he says he'll try it sometime but not just yet, "I'm still getting faster."

Fourteen teams from the Army and Air Guard entered the 1982 Hawaii National Guard Basketball Tournament.

Coming out on top of the grueling competition, the 154th Composite Group "A" team finished undefeated. The championship game took place on April 20 at the 487th Field Artillery Armory. Losing 39-32 to the 154th "A" squad in the final was the 487th. Taking third spot in the tournament was the 298th Engineer Detachment edging out the 227th Engineer Company.

In the final game between the 154th "A"s and the 487th, the Composite Group took command early and went to the locker room at half-time with a 10-point lead. In the second half, the 487th regained their earlier tournament stride and closed the gap to three points. However the 154th took control of the backboards with some strong work by John Rodrigues and Don Almodova.

Brig. Gen. Arthur U. Ishimoto was on hand to present the awards.

Also taking part in this year's tournament were: 154th Composite Group "B", "C", and "D"; 297th Supply and Service Battalion, 169th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron; 201st Combat Communications Group; Troop E, 19th Cavalry; 159th Service Battalion; and the 229th Medical Company.

Shibata win shoots 829th to top

Last year, Beverly Shibata, civilian, handled her .22 caliber rifle well enough to take second place in the Hawaii Army National Guard sponsored Governor's Trophy Match competition. This year, Beverly Shibata, Pvt. 2, shot even better, well enough to take home the Governor's Trophy and lead her fourperson team to the overall win.

Shibata, 19, shooting with the 829th Maintenance Company, HARNG, scored 368 points out of 400 to beat some grizzled HARNG and HANG veterans. Gov. George R. Ariyoshi recently congratulated her on the victory and presented her trophy.

Last year, Shibata was just about to graduate from high school and was participating as a Junior shooter. From her experience with the members of the HARNG, she decided the Guard was for her. Now in her freshman year at the University of Hawaii, Shibata looks forward to her career in the HARNG. She works in the 829th as a small arms renairer.

The Junior Shooter Program, now in its third year, matches high school shooters with various HNG units around the state. The program is designed to foster a sense of comraderie and teamwork between Hawaii's young people and the men and women of the Hawaii National Guard.

Other members of the winning 829th team were: Ray Cabradilla (361), Dennis Kawano (358), and Staff Sgt. Howard Goya (340). Total team score 1,427.

Second place team was Battery B, 1st Battalion, 487th Field Artillery (1,363).

Third place was the 1293rd Aviation Company, Wheeler Air Force Base (1,227).

In the individual standings: Shibata, first place (368); Tech. Sgt. Ron Muronaga, 154th Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, second (359); Staff Sgt. Steven Young, Battery B. 487th Field Artillery, Third (347); and Staff Sgt. Norman Tyau, 154th Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron fourth (344).

Reminder

Use your privileges

Most military bases in Hawaii have a wide variety of sports facilities that guard members can use. Not all are open to members all the time so check and plan ahead.

The special one-day tournament took place February 27 at the 487th Field Artillery gym. Six HANG teams took part. The 201st Combat Communications Flight, Maui, clinched second place. Lt. Col. Christopher Jay (left) donated the perpetual trophy.
