

Policies of President As To War Remind Marc Klaw of a Story

And This, Despite Deplorab'e
Truth That Theatrical Magnate
Was Born In Paducah

MARC KLAU said that President Wilson's policies as to the war reminded him of a story. Two boys were quarreling in the alley.

"Did you say that your black cat was better-looking than my sister?" one challenged the other.

"Naw! I didn't say nothin' of the kind. I said that your sister wasn't as good-lookin' as my black cat!"

That appeased the first speaker.

"Well, you'd better not say the other!" was his final word.

In spite of this, Mr. Klaw was born in Paducah, Kentucky, a state dedicated to Democracy and Marse Henry Waterson. Mr. Klaw and Irvin Cobb are the only men who ever came from Paducah—and admitted it.

Mr. Klaw will sail in the Matsonia tomorrow afternoon for Hilo to see the Volcano. He will depart for San Francisco in the Matsonia next Wednesday morning.
