New Designation For the Brigade

There's been no official announcement of it, but the 29th Infantry Brigade now is the U.S. Army Reserve Force in the Pacific.

It fills the designation first held by the 25th Infantry Division, followed by the 11th Light Infantry Brigade.

Lt. Gen. Edgar C. Doleman, deputy commander of U.S. Army Pacific, revealed the 29th's status in addressing the troops at Monday's aloha farewell ceremony at Ft. DeRussy.

"By its position of being there (Schofield Barracks), there's no question but that the 29th is the U.S. Army Reserve in the Pacific," an Army spokesman said. "There are no other combat troops in the U.S. Army Pacific Command area that are not committed."
